It's a not-for-profit organization designed to make Canada a leader in cybersecurity. It provides its membership with the people, space and infrastructure to work on complex, leading-edge cybersecurity problems affecting individuals, businesses and governments throughout the world.

Our interdisciplinary approach, served by a business ecosystem created specifically for cybersecurity problems, provides our membership with a rate of return that is expected to be ten times greater than if they worked independently.

VENUS is comprised of a number of key initiatives. Each has its own mandate:

- The Institute uses leaders in academia and a rigorous methodology to develop skilled knowledge workers in the cybersecurity space.
- Our research and development group, VENUS Projects, collaboratively solves cybersecurity problems by leveraging our expert members and our unique infrastructure
- VENUS Ventures works with Canadian accelerators to create new globally successful firms in the cybersecurity space.
- The Infrastructure provides a collaborative work environment with leading edge IT systems and workspaces that allow for simulations unavailable to even the largest global technology companies.
- The Ecosystem supports each VENUS initiative through the use of its world-class collaborative platform and network of members, suppliers and supporting organizations.
